

Creek Entry

20130808 (original)

Listening to the rushing static of water, I can hear chaotic harmony and rhythm. Underneath the multitude of splashes, crackles, and rushing hisses, I can hear lower frequencies swelling and flowing in long patterns. The pattern subtly changes as the creek reacts to it's own flow. Random events upstream conduct this ensemble I'm hearing.

20130817 (re-write # one)

Listening to the rushing static of water, I can hear harmony. Underneath the splashes and rushing hisses, I can hear lower frequencies in long patterns. The rhythm subtly changes as the creek reacts to it's own flow. Random events upstream conduct this.

20140906 (re-write # two)

Listening to the rushing static of water, I can hear harmony. Underneath the splashes and rushing hisses, I can hear lower frequencies in long patterns. The rhythm subtly changes as the creek reacts to it's own flow. Random events upstream conduct this moment of melodic movement.